FOR PRESIDENT, GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT

OF NEW JERSEY. FOR VICE PRESIDENT

WILLIAM A. GRAHAM. OF NORTH CAROLINA.

RESOLVED, That the Whig people of Washington, conscious that the ground they tread is worthy of the conscerated name it bears only so long as it is peopled by men who hold to the Union of the States as the source and fountain of the blessings of public order and private right—of liberty and law—of happiness at home, and honor throughout the world; and bellsving that in the principles and policy of the Whig party, and in the tried patriotism of its glorious leaders, is the best safeguard of the Union from domestic discord or foreign quarrel, no mold frames to those principles, and will rally with ardent and united hearts around the flag of the Union, to whomsoever of these leaders it may be confided in the approaching contest.—Proceedings of a Whig meeting prior to the nomination. RESOLVED, That the Whig people of Washington, conscio

NOTICE!

MOTICE!

It is absolutely necessary that all indebtedness to the office of the Dally American Telegraph, prior to the 16th of August, 1852, shall be paid forthwith. An earnest appeal is hereby made to every subscriber and advertising patron to comply with this request. Nothing short of the prompt payment of such arrears will save the undersigned from still more serious losses; and he trusts that no person however small may be his indebtedness, will disregard this Washington, Aug. 26, 1852.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Washington Whig Club will be held at the Hall on Louisiana avenue at 8 o'clock on Friday evening, September 3d. A full attendance is earnestly requested. By order:

S. A. H. McKIM, Sec'y. sep 2-2t [Int. and Rep.]

The Whigs in Council.

We have never seen a political meeting conducted in better spirit than that which graced the vast assemblage of the Whigs in front of the City Hall last night. The crowd was very large, the illumination of the platform handsome and effective, the music soul-cheering, the bonfires in the vicinity almost mischievously glowing, and last, but not least, the ladies in the great congre gation were sufficiently numerous to guaranty in the midst of the Whigs of Washington the most respectful and decorous deportment.

Walter Lenox, esq., President of the Washing ton Whig Club, called the meeting to order at a little past 8 o'clock, and after a brief but pertinent opening address introduced to the company Mr. Barrier, of Ohio, who brought cheering assurances from that beautiful State. Not his, he said, should be the task of uttering a disrespectful word of the candidate of our opponents. He might be all his party claimed him to be; he might be a gentleman and a statesman; but he is placed in a position in which a comparison is challenged with the hero and patriot whom the Whige have nominated for the exalted station to which they would elevate Gen. Pierce. Mr. Barrier then proceeded to institute the comparison between these gentlemen, and while he did so in the most liberal and courteous manner, the comparison was soon lost in the contrast, which drew every attentive hearer.

Ex-Governor CALL, of Florida, was next in troduced by Mr. LENOX, as "an aid-de-camp of General Jackson, a name by which all Democrats might swear!" As Governor Call came forth upon the platform he was greeted with three hearty cheers. His fine manly form and bearing appeared at once to excite the admiration of the assembly. He spoke with a heart animated with ardent devotion to the cause, not of Scott, to wage with the candidates of the Democratic sted the fact to the world! He had the testimony that could establish the fact. The gentleman named second upon the Democratic ticket he knew well; he had known and loved him well for twenty-five years as a gentleman. and respected him as a statesman. Gov. C. desired not to gainsay the merits of either of those glory ! gentlemen. It gave him pleasure to speak in their praise. But truth would sanction no language in reference to them that could place them upon a parallel with the illustrious chieftain whom we would elect to the Presidency of the United States. General Scott could not be honored by our suffrages for this or any other office. The measure of his fame was full. The American republic would be honored by the selection of one whose long and eventful life had adorned the pages of her history.

Governor Call briefly spoke of the life and campaigns of General Scott, and as he passed them in review he ridiculed the assertion made by the less scrupulous of our opponents that the gallant hero was unfitted for the civil trust we would repose in him. He did not contend that vices he has performed for the Whig party, he the mere physical qualities that are essential to has contracted a bronchial affection, and his both ancient and modern, and he referred to the essential attributes required by the accomplished tucky; and from the Keystone State we have no authority, but that its possession is presumptive plough-handles, speak the name of Scott; her conduct, while acting Secretary of War, with reference to the Compromise. Is there any man here, he asked, who regards Gen. Scott as a trailife, he loves her sunny clime, and every interest on the hills. she possesses is dear to him; but his heart and his affections extend to the whole Union; and devotion of their States, and of the majorities whenever the stars and stripes of the republic they will give to our candidates. But pile up are upraised, the patriotic ardor of his soul ex- your majorities to the highest, and my word for tends, and his protecting arm is ready to uphold it, the old Keystone will still be at the summit of that flag and to defend it! He is no sectional the arch. She will double the largest majority man; and if any man supports him as such, that of which you can boast! man will be self-deceived. His blood was as Hon. Mr. Chilton was the next speaker. He whole republic, and to his own great fame, the proud heritage of the republic!

After the enlivening strains of Marsoletti's band, and a cheering song by a gentleman on the stand, Mr. Lenox introduced a gentleman, whose name he justly remarked was as a household word in our midst-Joseph H. Bradley, esq. Mr. Bradley's well-known form appeared, and he was greeted with loud applause. "The same old coon," he said laughingly-" a little stouter, and growing bald, but the same old 'coon. I have seen you before, years ago, as now-an acre of apturned faces, beaming with friendly smiles. I talked to you then as I propose to do now. I sat at my desk an hour or two ago, little dreaming that I should make a speech to-night, and hardly determined to come forth and hear the speeches made by others. My pen was in my hand, and my inkstand and paper before me. But I heard your music. It was to the good old tune. It told of the days when victory sat perched upon our banners, and a monitor told me those days were revived. I threw the pen from my hand, left the ink to evaporate, and came forth to unite with you in the noble efforts you are makingaye, making in the good old way."

Mr. Bradley spoke of parties, of conventions and of platforms. They were not to his taste. Men of whom the people thought nothing and knew nothing-though worthy they might bewere by means of party machinery brought before the country, and without a why or wherefore THE PARTY was called upon to sanction them. The people, however, had spoken. Their choice had preceded that of party managers and schemers. Their voice had been uttered in a spontaneous acclamation, and it would prove omnipotent. Moved by patriotism, by justice, by magnanimity and gratitude, a call had been made upon a great and venerated patriot: that call would be formally ratified in November, and the menaced reproach upon our country of injustice and ingratitude would be turned aside forever!

Mr. Bradley was so hearty and cheering in nanner, so full of hope and ardor, and appeared to rely so confidently for success upon the justice of his cause and the intelligence and patriotism of the American people, that a sympathetic chord seemed to vibrate throughout his multitude of hearers, and their applause went up in deafening shouts.

Ex-Governor Morehead, of Kentucky, was the next orator; and he delivered such a speech as no American could listen to unmoved. He had been the constituent of HENRY CLAY, and HENRY CLAY had been his constituent. He well knew the sentiments and the opinions of that great statesman, and of the noble State of which he had the honor to be a citizen. There was no doubting either of them. Like the gentlemen who had preceded him, Governor Morehead would make no remark in disparagement or in an unkind spirit of the adversaries of our party; but he was prepared to defend at every point the fame of Winfield Scott. Praise had everywhere forth involuntary exclamations from the lips of been accorded to the early friends of the late Compromise; but who were they? Was Winfield Scott one of them? The speaker was in the habit of daily conversation with General Scott while the important measures of the Com- and many friends. promise were pending; and he had witnessed the intense interest which seemed to absorb the mind and soul of that great man. And when the triumph was complete-when the country was rejoicing over the triumph of PEACE and AMITY-when the patriot CLAY was permitted to look upon the nor of Graham, nor of the Whig party, but to fruits of his noble conceptions and labors-it was the cause of his country! He had no idle war then that Winfield Scott, yielding to the generous and patriotic impulses of his soul, was among party. The first of those candidates might, for the first to congratulate the venerable Kentucksught he knew, possess all the qualities that are lian and his country upon the long-wished-for rerequisite to constitute the soldier and the states- sult! The speaker heard that letter read by the man; but he had never learned that he had lips of Henry Clay himself immediately upon the receipt of it. Without vanity, the writer s never seen a record nor heard from human lips he might allude to the laurels he had won upon the tented field; but, said he, I would relinquish them all for such honors as you have won in this your latest and proudest achievement, in bringing peace to your country, and opening before her the vista of union, prosperity, and future

General Morehead spoke of the civil qualifications of Gen. Scott, and grieved that any American could be found to seek to detract from his high reputation for ability, intelligence, and moral worth. His heart was elate with pride as he contemplated the man of our choice, whose purity, whose merits, whose attainments, whose goodness of heart, whose nobleness of motive. and undoubted patriotism, commend him to the admiration of his countrymen and of the world.

We trust that a full report of this eloquent and truthful address may be presented to the public, from the notes of the stenographers whom we saw present.

The Hon, ANDREW A. STUART, of Pennsylva nia, was next introduced. In the years of serthe warrior, are all that is requisite in the civil voice may not be exercised with impunity. But, governor; but he referred to the history of when called upon to speak in such a cause, he Greece, and of Rome, and of all other nations, could not remain silent. A good report had been received from Ohio, from Florida, and from Kenand intelligent commander of armies, in proof of unwelcome message. He spoke of Gen. Scott's cinating talk of free-trade abstractionists-no experience in civil matters, and especially of his longer to give encouragement to the American politicians who have deceived them, nor to their British allies, for whose advantage the fires in their furnaces have been extinguished. His hands, he will be found true to the North, to the hopes in her just decision were by no means South, to the East, and to the West-true to the dim. In many portions of the State the most encouraging indications were given. Virginia had long followed the fortunes of a party whose name and whose professions were deceptive. [We regret that our position prevented our hearing connectedly the remarks of Mr. Chilton, a true and eloquent and an effective advocate of the great Whig cause.]

Mr. SEVIER, of Louisiana, responded to an invitation to address the meeting. The hour was late, but the temptation was strong. He would adopt the "five-minute rule" of the House of Representatives. He made a rallying speech, full of fire, energy, and enthusiasm. In the Baltimore Convention he had urged the nomination of the faithful and honored Fillmore through fifty-three ballotings, and would have stood by him till doomsday. But he was defeated. The battle had been fairly and honorably fought, and the victors deserved the victory. His acquiesence in the result was at once given. He required no time for reflection. He had gone into the Convention in good faith, and in good faith he was prepared to abide its decision. A candidate had been chosen who had already occupied prominent place before the public as a candidate for the Presidency. He was worthy of every honor. He had not been the first choice of Louisiana, but Louisiana was not the State to assume a dictatorial and imperious attitude. She reveres the hero whose name is before her, and she will be true to him, to the Whig party, to the Union, and to her own fame. But his fiveminutes were out. [Shouts of "no, no," and a unanimous vote to suspend the rule !] General Scott, they say, has no soubriquet. Let us dispense with it. He would not offend our opponents by applying such as were disrespectful to their candidate; but he would compare him with our own. He did so; but again the disproportion arose to view, and the contrast was such as the friends of General Pierce ought not to have provoked!

[Late in the evening some persons-presumed ot to be Whigs!-placed themselves in the shadow of the adjacent houses, and threw stones into the meeting, striking and injuring several gentlemen. We regret to say-but it is truethat such annoyances not unfrequently attend Whig meetings in this city. There must be a had state of feeling in some circles.]

The meeting adjourned in good feeling and ouoyant spirits-our navy yard friends, with the Marine band, our Georgetown friends, with banners and music, and the peaceful and worthy men and women of our own city, who are as ever at large. Forthcoming Life of Pierce.

Hawthorne's Life of Pierce is to appear early in this month. Pierce has of late been on a visit to Mr. Hawthorne's home, and we doubt not the affair will be pretty well got up. If there should be a dearth of incident, the author of "The Seven Gables," and other popular works of fiction will probably not be at a loss. He is an accomplished writer, and his narratives and descriptions are regarded as true to nature. We shall peruse his forthcoming volume with pleasure: it will, beyond a doubt, gratify General Pierce, his family,

Yet we are half inclined to think they deserve contempt, after toad-ying such a vulgar cockney as Charles Dickens. [Richmond Republican.

Charlie writes good stories, and we read them and praise them. So far, well. But Charlie says hard things about us. Every story he writes involves a biting satire on England and all her institutions. eculiar or otherwise. We ought not to mind what Charlie and such chaps say of us. When they find our cities as full of toadies as ever Egypt was-always ready to play the flunkey to a foreign scribbler, demagogue, or dancing wonan-of course they must think humbly of us. PHILADELPHIA, Sep. 1. A vast concourse of persons assembled in Inlependence Square to-night, which is beautifully luminated with gas. The fixtures are fastened gainst the trees, having an arch of lights over e platform and a brilliant star in the centre. The speaking is now going on from two stands at opposite ends of the Square. The clubs from the ifferent districts formed an imposing procession with lights, lanterns and banners. Resolutions were adopted welcoming the Whig representa-ives, complimenting them for having sustained the administration, renewing the pledge of fidelity to the Baltimore platform, and hailing the certain triumph of their candidate in the coming contest. Among the speakers are Messrs. Parker and Thompson, of Indiana; Campbell, of Ohio, and other eloquent orators.

Democratic State Convention.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 1.

At 12 o'clock the Democratic State convention met, when Mr. Rice, of Brooklyn, nominated Mr. Bristol, (Hunker,) of Tioga, as temporary chairman. At the same moment Mr. Stetson nominated Mr. Lapham, (Barnburner,) of Ontario. Much confusion ensued, and when the vote was taken both parties claimed the victory. It was then proposed to appoint two secretaries who should call the roll, in order to ascertain which of the nominees had received a majority of votes. This proposition was carried, and upon casting up the votes, Bristol (Hunker) was declared hosen. Much time was consumed about disputed seats. A committee of one from each district was then appointed to select permanent officers, and pending an angry contention about contested seats, the convention adjourned till tomorrow morning.

TO THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON, D. C., AND OF THE U. STATES OF AMERICA :

THE Senate of the United States has adjourned, leaving me without a dine. Three sessions have now passed, and they have refused to do me "justice," as many Senators promised to me, before and after the 5th of April, 1850, as you can find in my article published in this paper July 29, 1852. What shall be done in the matter now? Let all 29, 1852. What shall be done in the matter now? Let at favorable to me address me as soon you can, and advise an assist me as much as you can. At least, send me $2 each for my paper, "The Truth," for it shall be published as soon so possible, and in it I will give a true history of the act of Senators towards me since the 6th of December, 1846 So let all sid me now that love "The Truth." Eadles, will you not sid me? for I have proved myself your frue friend JAMES ROBERTSON, of New York, Editor of "The Truth," at Washington, D. C.

sept 1—1t^a

N. B.—Senator Adams, of Mississippi, told me that he tried to have the case taken up on the 31st of August, before the Senate adjourned. Why think you it was not noticed in any of the papers that reported the proceedings in regard to the adjournment? There hangs a tale about "The truth," which my enemies fear.

HOMICIDE. -- We learn that W. W. Grant, a negro, was committed for court this morning for and remit. He has "come it" over several persons by this story. We have invested a little in that "institution" ourselves.—Ohio State Jour-jail this morning about 6 o'clock, and gave himkilling one Samuel Davis, negro, last night, by self up, stating what he had done. Davis, it appears, was much the stouter man, and Grant has been sick several weeks. The deceased had made an assault upon Grant.

ADIES! A few words with you: will you give me your kind altention! Men must acknowledge that they are indebted to your sex for existence; yet some, judging them by their acts or works towards your sex, would like to deprive you of that honor—for homer is inaut that, too, greater than the would be honor of Minrod, the mighty hunter of men, even before the ages of Alexander, or Ceeau, or Napoleon, or any other great general. Therefore, 1 on are worthy to be honored above men on earth, because you give life, instead of seeking hours, by destroying that which can never be restored. And when young I saw your cares, troubles, and sorrows; and I then determined that I would not add ought to your miseries in this life, nor yet for the life that is to come, with God. And from the advice of my saint-d mother, who is now an angel in a mansion prepared by him. That was your se's true friend, whose last thoughts on the cross was to provide a good home for his dear mother, as described by John, the beloved disciple. I have ever tried to be like him—your true friend is all cases. And some future day I may tell you all about it—how I have thought, worked, and toiled for your good. to elevate your sex, knowing that, just in proportion as you were elevated, so would be the elevation of the race of mankind. But what I desire to say to you now is, when I was about seven years of age, my mother, in one of her lessons of wisdom to me, said: James, if you live to grow up to be a man, and get in trouble, and men forsake you, then call upon women, and she will sid you. Ladies, will you prove her words and judgment to be true? Or will you forsake me is my troubles—troubles such as few, if any, of my sex have ever been called on to pass through.

No mortal on warth can conceive what I have endured since the 6th of December, 1849. Yet I am as innocent as any one of you ladies are of the base crime charged upon me; for I had never thou or since I was seven years of age—the day my mother pre-sented me a copy of the Bible for having read it through?
